BILL RELATING LIBEL PRESENTED

Mr. Whithead Offers Important Measure Affecting Newspapers.

Hon. John Whithead, of Norfolk city, yesterday filed in the House a bill of much public interest on the subject of libel, defining the offense and providing punishment for the same. The bill, which is actually the law now in force in Norfolk, provides that in any newspaper or periodical which publishes an article, the publisher shall be given, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison.

Be enacted by the General Assembly of Virginia, That before any proceedings, either civil or criminal, shall be brought for libel in a newspaper or periodical, the plaintiff shall file in the court a copy of the article, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison.

Be enacted by the General Assembly of Virginia, That before any proceedings, either civil or criminal, shall be brought for libel in a newspaper or periodical, the plaintiff shall file in the court a copy of the article, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison, and if it appears in the article was printed in good faith that the error was an honest one, and that the publisher has been made, the defendant shall receive only one year in prison.
